There are two methods of solution, viz.

- (1) The first method is to find the value of the function at the points where the function is zero, and then to find the value of the function at the points where the function is not zero.
- (2) The second method is to find the value of the function at the points where the function is zero, and then to find the value of the function at the points where the function is not zero.

It is clear that the first method is more complicated than the second method.

Desire Burdick was Roys Gaylord's second wife. He was married first Jan. 31, 1818 to Orra Matthews (1791, May 24th, Burlington, Conn. By his first marriage there were two children, Lucetta Smith (b. 1824, June 26 d. 1885, May 18) and Julius Matthews (b. 1826, Aug. 13, d. 1826, Aug. 14). Gaylord is the English form of the French "Gaillard". The name was brought into England by a Huguenot refugee from Gaillard, Normandy. The first of the name in America was William Gaylord who with his adult family came in the "Mary and John" from England, reaching Dorchester, Mass. in 1630 and finally settled in Windsor Conn. Roys Gaylord was ninth in descent from him. His father, Chauncey Gaylord (b. 1757, Feb 14) while learning the blacksmith trade was drafted and served ten months in the Revolutionary Army.

Osiah Burdick was born near Kingston Hill about a mile from the Mount Hope. When about 8 years old his parents moved to E. Greenwich. In the fall of 1824 he entered the employment of his brother, Pelham, who was a successful qualified commissioner, but he soon started out for himself. He worked the first time on the old Providence railroad and for many years was connected with the old Providence and Weymouth. He took the first ride over the Weymouth road, the trip being done by the horse engine, the horse being a mule. As a railroad worker he employed many horses. He built a house on Marlborough Street before he married, where all his children were born. After 30 years railroading he went into the coal and oil business in East Greenwich. He also was a long builder. He was trustee of the Methodist Church for over thirty years, a member and officer of the Masons and Odd Fellows, a Revueist, held

Daniel Burdick was born near Kingston Hill about a mile from the court house. When about 8 years old his parents moved to E. Greenwich. In the fall of 1836 he entered the employment of his brother, Welcome, who was a successful railroad contractor, but he soon started out for himself. He struck the first blow on the old Norwich railroad and for many years was connected with the old Providence and Stonington. He took the first ride over the Providence road, the train being drawn by the famous engine, the Rhode Island. As a railroad builder he employed many hands. He built a house on Marlborough Street before he married, where all his children were born. After 30 years railroading he went into the real estate business in East Greenwich. He also was a house builder. He was trustee of the Methodist Church for over fifty years, a member and officer of the Masons and Odd Fellows, a Republican, held
